The Burren is widely regarded as one of Europe's most outstanding landscapes. Defined by its ice-and-water sculpted limestone geology, it is suffused with Ireland's richest flora and fauna, hosting species from Arctic, Alpine and Mediterranean climes. This wonderful natural heritage is further enhanced by the presence of over six thousand years of cultural heritage, a remarkable legacy in stone.

The Burren represents many things to many people – a home place and a resource of inestimable value for the communities who dwell here, a unique national treasure for the people of Ireland, and a landscape of enormous cultural significance to all who value mankind's rich heritage.

People have lived and farmed in the Burren for over six thousand years and are very much part of the fabric of this landscape. Developing sustainable land use practices for the Burren, and raising awareness of the region through education and information provision are critical in sustaining these communities and their special place.

By supporting the work of the Burrenbeo Trust you can help to ensure that the Burren is safeguarded, so that future generations might also enjoy and be inspired by the magic of the place referred to by Cistercian monks 800 years ago as 'Petra fertilis' - the fertile rock.

Welcome to the Burrenbeo Trust

Burrenbeo Trust Limited is an independent, registered charity (CHY 16834) created in 2005. The core objective of the Trust is to create a greater appreciation of the Burren as a living landscape of international importance, to engage in research and dissemination of information and to promote the holistic and self-sustaining conservation and development of the Burren.

The Trust builds on the work of Burrenbeo Teoranta which was founded in January 2002 as an information and education provider for the Burren.

Since its inception, the work of Burrenbeo ('the living Burren') has included the development of the portal website for the Burren www.burrenbeo.com and the production of an award-winning CD ROM 'Images of the fertile rock' as well as a range of multilingual fact-sheets. In 2005 Burrenbeo opened a free information centre in the gateway Burren town of Kinvara.

Burrenbeo also developed the 'Eco-Beo – My Burren Heritage' educational programme for Burren schools from which hundreds of young Burren experts have already graduated. Burrenbeo has also conducted research and advanced proposals for a more strategic and sustainable approach to the management of the Burren.

In order to continue this very necessary work as an independent organisation and build an even stronger foundation for the future protection and development of this region, we are now asking others to join in supporting the work of Burrenbeo.

Reasons to join the Burrenbeo Trust

- to make a meaningful contribution to the conservation of one of Europe's most unique and significant landscapes
- to have your say in the future of the Burren and help promote greater dialogue between interested parties at all levels
- to celebrate and enjoy the Burren's remarkable natural and cultural heritage through walks, talks and other information
- to support farming families and local communities in their important role in managing this landscape
- to foster an appreciation of the Burren among school-children, parents, teachers and visitors to the area
- to help manage land for the maintenance of traditional farming and the conservation of rock features and flora
- to make friends with others drawn to this extraordinary area from across the world

Members will receive:

- The Burrenbeo bi-annual magazine, and our monthly electronic newsletter
- Invitations to regular walks and talks throughout the year
- A listing on the Burrenbeo website (if requested)
- A pack of five beautiful Burrenbeo cards
- A copy of the award-winning CD ROM 'Images of the fertile rock' (only while stocks last!)
